was crowded in the middle of an afternoon. The first thing I noticed on entering the Manitoba building was the amount of room I had, as there was only one other person looking at the exhibits downstairs and upstairs was empty. The exhibits are pretty fair, but while looking at them you are reminded that there is a sidewalk in connection as your eye meets such notices as "To the Dining Room," etc. The Sunday school on one side of the Manitoba may have a sanctifying effect, but it cannot make up for the large number of villainous fakers on the other side. It makes a Manitoban ashamed when he sees the fine buildings and displays that even some of the small South American republics have, where thousands pass daily through them, and Manitoba not in it. I think it would shake the faith of the most ardent supporter of the government could they see what the country has paid so heavily for and got such poor returns from, except the hotel-keeper.

A SOUTH BRANDON FARMER.

THE ELECTION

The number of voters who are working-men in Brandon are just now absent in the country, helping to harvest the crop, and are not easily traced. These are principally supporters of Mr. Macdonald. It is possible for those friendly to Mr. Macdonald's candidature to do him valuable service by assisting to trace those missing electors, and found to send to Brandon to vote on the 8th proximo. The list of 1892 is being used, so that all who had votes in the election of July last year are voters in this. Mr. Adams, who is a good protectionist and supporter of the Ottawa Government, would no doubt be a valuable addition to the Greenway party in the Manitoba Legislature; but such an advantage would be dearly purchased at the expense of Mr. Macdonald's defeat. A Greenway Government without an Opposition is too terrible to contemplate. Mr. Macdonald's friends outside should do all in their power to aid in his election. This is good advice, and should be remembered by all good friends of Mr. Macdonald.—Free Press.

KASLO'S COLLAPSE.

The Claim of That City Announces Its Pending Suspension.

This paper will probably suspend next week. Not because the sheriff has intervened in its reference to back dues, but simply because it does not pay to publish a paper in Kaslo. We are in the business for money, not fame, and the cash ledger having "pinched out," we will not prospect for any more fame.

Last spring everything was glowing in Kaslo. We all expected to pile up the golden shekels this year, and a great many of us would have done so if the principal owners of property and the railroad charter monopolists had displayed any brains in managing their business. This town had more free advertising last winter than any town in America, and when the rush started, if the K. & S. Railway company had commenced to build their road to the mines, Kaslo would be prosperous to-day, and the town site people would have had thousands of dollars paid them for real estate. They may learn some day how to make a town prosperous and themselves rich. Kaslo Claim.

HIS SECOND DEFEAT.

Shagper and Dick French, recognized as the two fastest trotting horses in the province, met at Prairie Park Winnipeg on Saturday afternoon, the closing day of the Manitoba Turf Club's Autumn races. This meeting, which local horsemen and turf enthusiasts have so earnestly striven to bring about, was satisfactory, in that it drew a few much-needed dollars to the somewhat depleted treasury of the turf club. Viewed from every other standpoint, it was disappointing. The day was cold and the track in poor shape, thus at the outset precluding the possibility of fast time. This was in itself a disappointment, for those who have loyally stood by old Prairie park in all its adversity, had fondly hoped to see it get a respectable trotting mark before its probable abandonment. But the erratic action of the sharpest wits, the chief source of dissatisfaction, actions aggressive to the spectators generally and exasperating to those who had staked their money on him. In every heat he broke wildly on the first quarter and then at intervals from the quarter pole to the wire. That he showed greater speed than his rival is a statement that not one in a hundred will controvert, but this fact was only an additional aggravation. Regaining his feet he would quickly close up, hoping to gain by the close of the race, but he would fly into the air again and fall back. French on the other hand proved himself reliable, keeping steadily to his clockwork gait from start to finish.

The Tramping Journalist.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 27.—Edward Holmes, the tramping journalist, reached here last night, completing his long tramp across the continent. He has been 117 days on the passage, twenty-seven of which he did not walk. His average time was thirty-two miles per day, the biggest distance covered in twenty-four hours was fifty-two miles. Holmes is the first man to cross the continent by the Canadian route. He has accomplished several big walks. He was first to cross Central America through the bush. He also footed it across both islands of Japan and travelled through a great part of Siam. His last day's tramp was from Warnock to Vancouver forty miles. He started at 7 o'clock a.m. completing the distance in ten hours. His 3,000 mile tramp has decreased his weight and he feels better in health than when he started from Montreal on May 2nd last.

Mr. Macdonald's Meeting, City Hall

Large and Enthusiastic Gathering—Graphic Exposure of the Government's Financial Policy

A meeting was called to order punctually at 8.30; Mr. A. Kelly in the chair, who at once rose and in a few well chosen words introduced Mr. Macdonald to the large audience. On Mr. Macdonald rising he was met with rounds of applause. Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: It affords me great pleasure to see so large and intelligent an audience present, and also a large sprinkling of the fair sex of our City of Brandon. At this first general meeting, allow me to thank one and all of my supporters for the noble stand they made in my favor at the last general election. I am again before you to solicit your suffrages, and before proceeding further, I will in a few brief words, explain the reason of my being unseated. I may say in this connection that those opponents of mine, who have tested my election, admitted themselves before the courts, that they could bring no charge of a personal character against me. I, however, preferred to take the burden on myself. Every resource that knavery and unscrupulous fraud could invent had been adopted to nullify my election; to blacken my character and to deprive me of the support of all right thinking men. I say here publicly, and I challenge my opponent now on this platform, to deny if he can, that the ballot boxes of polling division numbers one and ten were stuffed, with the intention of rendering of no effect the verdict recorded in my favor as the polls by a free and enlightened electorate. (Applause) However, while the protest was dragging along, the house met in session and I took my seat therein. When I went to the legislature, I had the impression that I might be tendered the leadership of the Opposition and this happened I accepted the position with a great deal of diffidence as it was the first time in my knowledge of political history that any young man had taken such a position without previous parliamentary experience. However, I had in mind the duty I owed, not only to the men who had elected me in the City of Brandon, but also to the province at large. I knew that the majority of you in this city took great interest in the election, and my brief parliamentary career, and I ask you fearlessly, whether the pledges I made in my campaign were not carried out and whether I did not justify your confidence in me by the course I took in the house. (Loud applause) I had the pleasure of receiving the compliments, not merely of the members on my own side of the house, but also a large number of the government members. The session was short and sharp, but many matters of interest to the public were dealt with during its course, and I did my utmost to lay before the members in all matters that came up for discussion, what I thought best for the interest of the people. My course in the house as Leader of the Opposition was not that of a factious opponent of everything done by the Government. On the contrary, where it appeared to me that the government was legislating in the true interest of the people, I gave them my hearty support. I had the pleasure and satisfaction upon more than one occasion of complimenting the Attorney General upon measures brought in by him, upon others unfortunately I had to oppose him. I will now briefly allude to a few acts of public interest with the framing or passing of which I was connected. Take the Assessment Act, I may say as to that matter, I and my colleagues did our utmost to have this act put in a fair and equitable shape but without success. However should you return me again as your representative I shall make it my business to have this law so amended that the rights of all shall be fairly recognized by it. There was another matter that I was interested in and that I had made a special pledge in connection with. That pledge was made to the working-men of the city of Brandon (cheers) and I joyfully lay me at the polls, and I felt it my duty to redeem the pledge I had made on the platform. When I made this pledge my then opponent Mr. Smart and his supporters took at first no notice whatever of the matter. Later, however, in Mann and Durham's office rank, Attorney General Sifton condescended to say that, had the working men of the province desired such a compensation Act as that which I had pledged myself to have passed by the government, they might have sent a deputation to the government when the government would have discussed the matter and, if deemed beneficial, would have made the required Act.

Now gentlemen, I consider that the representatives of the people are chosen to legislate for the people, not the people to legislate for their representatives (Hear, Hear, and loud applause). However, gentlemen the Act was passed, without, it is fair to say, any opposition on the part of the government, and in May last the Working-men's Compensation Act came into force, by which workmen are entitled to compensation for injuries received. (Cheers) Up to this time last year three men had been killed on the City Public works, up to the present this year, only one accident not fatal has occurred and compensation has been paid, clearly proving the existence of the Act has forced contractors to exercise greater precautions for the safety of their employees. I may say to you, gentlemen, that I did not make this pledge for the purpose of catching votes, but to show you that this government, which takes such fatherly care of its non-competing railroad and Chicago Side Shows, had utterly neglected the people's interest in this matter (loud applause).

Now as to the Compensation Act, this was a matter also which I had resolved to have amended. While the former is entitled to an exemption of $200,000, while he is entitled to hold $500,000 worth of goods and chattels, the clerk or hired man were only entitled to $25 worth. I believe a man with a family could not possibly live on that amount in the event of a garnishee being put in by any creditors who through sickness or misfortune he was unable to pay. My efforts were successful, and the amount exempt was raised to $400 (Loud cheers).

I cannot go over in detail all the Acts, with the framing of which I was connected. However, you will be able to trace my handwork from reports in the public press. I did the best I could in the interest of the people that was possible without undue cavilling. I now come to a matter which is not a pleasant one to discuss. I refer to the Ryan and Haney claim. The speaker detailed the transaction with which the public is already familiar connected with this claim up to its sudden payment in 1892; just before the general election and need many extracts from the press bearing on this iniquitous transaction. When challenged by the Hon. T. M. Daly last summer, Mr. Sifton and Mr. Smart alike observed a discreet silence knowing the detrimental influence to their party, which would result from any admission on their part. (Loud applause) The late Hon. John Norquay, refused to pay this claim in face of the arbitration award. The speaker here read a letter from Joseph Martin respecting payment by provincial Government of $14,000. After a lapse of three years, Mr. Greenway's Government saw fit to pay the firm of Ryan & Haney $45,000 without taking those proceedings by which humble persons like himself, or this audience, who are wealthy railroad contractors are obliged to collect debts due to them.

CHICAGO SIDE SHOW

He would now deal with the Chicago Peanut Stand. (Laughter) During the session of the House in 1892, Mr. Greenway without leave or license, made certain arrangements with an hotel keeper named Samuel Griggs, to have our products exhibited at an hotel on Stony Island Ave., or better known now as Fake Ave. (Laughter and applause) He did not believe it correct that the province should take up the hotel business (hear, hear). No government should so lower itself as to become hotel keepers. He would say the wisdom of the world was arrayed against the province of Manitoba, for we were the only people who had no exhibit inside the show, the greatest show the world has ever seen (applause). We had in this province a great future and had we done what all intelligent countries had, we should have had our great productions, wheat, in the Canadian agricultural building. He had seen our exhibit and had seen the Canadian exhibit and we were out of it. Yes, we were out in the midst of lemonade vendors, dime museums and peanut stands. The Hon. Mr. Greenway said, he hung his head in shame when he saw the Canadian building. Well it might be easy for him to hang his head, (laughter) but the speaker would tell them the Canadian building was the prettiest building on the grounds but we Manitobans have no home there. We are looked upon by many people, for our actions in this matter, not as shrewd people, but as small people. It was thought by most people that Manitoba was too poor to afford a place inside the World's exhibition, is a money-making concern. The speaker here read a copy of the charter, building the Manitoba Hotel, from this it appears it cost nearly $200,000 to make it a paying concern. A great portion of this money, put up by the province, was paid out for the erection of private individuals (applause). He would ask the gentlemen, if they doubted his statement, to go to Winnipeg, interview any of the prominent liberals that can be met there, and the consensus of opinion amongst these men is, that the whole concern is a fraud. He would remind them that the government did not require to go before the people for two years and they were praying that their existence might extend to the full length of their term and that the peoples anxiety might be frustrated as it very often is (applause). He would ask them if the province had anything to be proud of in Chicago. He had not met a single gentleman in the city who was prepared to support the side show. Until he became a member of the legislature, was under the impression, that the financial policy of the government had been a good one. Thought we had any amount of money in fact thought we were a bank, but found instead of having a surplus we had a deficit. In 1891 financially matters were very pleasant according to Mr. McMillan's broadsheet which he would now read them, the government was drawing interest on $507,000. During the last session he waited on the Hon. Mr. Macmillan who admitted there was a deficit. The plain fact of the matter was, that just before the general election the government started they had $135,000 on hand. Immediately after the opening of the house, they asked for a loan of one million. What had become of this $1,000,000? He did not wish them to think that this was for election expenses. But he would again ask, what had become of this large sum? (Hear Hear and applause).

He had expected that Mr. Smart would have been his opponent at this election and he would have been happy to meet that gentleman again. For he could say with all sincerity that Mr. Smart was a gentleman in every sense of the word. (Loud applause) He thought that he, as a leader of the Opposition would have been treated fairly, but this had not been the case. Every expedient had been exhausted by the Government, even to defrauding 250 duly qualified voters of their franchise, in order to defeat the speaker. In the spring, when canvassing parties canvassed had said to him, "Why bother us now, there will be no election before fall." It had indeed so turned out, and he must confess that the delay had been very worrisome to him, but there was enough to satisfy him to stand it and hold on. (Laughter and applause). The Government is in a bad state; they endeavored to catch the speaker and his friends asleep. He had asked a gentleman of the Opposition party, why the election was sprung on us at this awkward time; and some of them had been frank enough to reply, "Well, Mac, we thought we could knock you that way." (Laughter) However, they may be mistaken. He quoted these facts to prove how eager the Government was to drive the speaker out of public life.

If his opponents career as Mayor of the City of Brandon, was worthy of their confidence, they could vote for him, but he was not going into that question now. He believed that while a good Government was proper. A good Opposition was essential to the welfare of the country. (Hear, Hear). A Government must pick from the best men in Canada, left without a Opposition would fall into trouble. (Applause)

He might be unworthy but he was leader of the opposition and he asked them to remember that the opposition would be seriously hampered by his fall. He would ask all liberals to remember that. The sympathies of the province were with him, if not those of the city. He would close by saying that they had the choice to make and he believed they would make it well. Should I be defeated I would willingly retire into private life, but should they in their wisdom choose him again as their representative, he would willingly undertake the task, and do all in his power to justify their confidence (Loud and prolonged cheering).

MR. ADAMS

On rising he received with cheers. He said he was pleased to see so large an audience. As showing the deep interest taken in the coming election. Being merely a business man. He had not as much to say as a lawyer. (Laughter) Being an ordinary business man therefore he had felt to-night listening to the very able speech of his friend Mr. Macdonald how utterly unable he was to cope with him. It was the first time in his life he had addressed a political audience. He would like to go back a short time in the history of this province, about twelve years ago he had come from the east a conservative, and a prejudiced one at that. He had voted for Mr. Norquay's administration. There had been many things done by that government which he did not consider good for the country. (Hear hear).

His friend Mr. Macdonald had complained of shortness of time for election. He agreed with Mr. Macdonald there, but he thought he was the one to complain.

He would commence by dealing with the railways. Until the government had introduced their general railway policy and brought in the N. P. R., we were without railroad competition. Mr. Macdonald says this has done no good to the country. The speaker then spoke at length on his business as affected by the N. P. R.

The speaker further remarked that he thought there were too many lawyers in the House. (Laughter). He would recommend placing a few good business men there. Business men did things cheaper than lawyers. In regard to the debt owed by this province, which at Mr. Macdonald's figures is $2,500,000 he would state that the city of Winnipeg alone with its 25,000 inhabitants owed the same amount. If the railway policy of the government is injurious, why is not the opposition stronger. The government deserved great credit for building the Souris branch which is a benefit to all in the city of Brandon.

You all know that through this Here province that it is better that the province should bear the debt, than the municipalities. $115,000 represented the deficit of the Norquay Government. Government which his friend Mr. Macdonald and himself had seen fit to support.

The speaker regretted very much that the papers and politicians of this country are desecrating our magnificent exhibit as the City of Chicago by calling it a "Side show and a pea nut stand." I believe in the right of criticism, but when we have opponents of the Government trying to injure our country for political purposes, I draw the line. My friend, Mr. Macdonald, does not even state that the exhibit is good. (Mr. Macdonald: I do say so.) (Applause) The speaker then went deeply into the financial circumstances of the show.

Owing the lack of space, we are obliged to disappoint our numerous readers, and postpone the completion of our report until our next issue. We regret this exceedingly, but both gentlemen spoke at great length and the report is a very full one of each.

A notorious female swindler has been sentenced to three years imprisonment in Paris. She has a dozen husbands living. She advertised for a husband, describing herself most flatteringly, and said she had a fortune of $150,000. She married one wealthy suitor after another, only to dump a day or two after the wedding with the presents and whatever she could lay hands on.

Why, is Mr. John F. Woodley, employed at the Court House? Cannot Mr. Lou Clement and Mr. Darroch do work? Or is it necessary to employ labour during election time.

THE BURIED COIN.

A Story of the New West, by J. H. Falcon

Here we find ourselves suddenly transported as it were by some invisible agency, to the banks of a large and winding river, where, emerging like from a high bank above, disappears similarly below, crossing our path with a band of fallen sky—coming from a mystic nowhere and passing into another beyond.

We have settled after our long flight, it seems, under the boughs of a considerable forest, whose cooling foliage protects us now gratefully from the glowing sunrays.

Cast your restful glance along the park-like openings that grew between the lines of elm poles, with ash-leaved maples and poplars and oaks that line the banks, or mark again the stream of the river as it glides past, and listen to its murmurous, foamy-hushed voice as it seethes down the rapids, and yonder, many a splash of the big fish on the smooth, cloud-mirrored surface of the dark pool below. There the mother-goose and her consort now launch confidently from the brink with their numerous, yellow-backed black-billed brood; all unmindful of the dangers that lurk below. There the long snappers snap with an evil eye, as he sails above.

Various wild fowl play about the banks, or skim with whisking wing the surface—true children of the element—their sport of various species, passing us with a loud clamor of protest of our invasion of their cherished solitudes.

Yonder a curlew stands watchfully by the water's edge, poor creature, cynically over a six-inch drooping bill. But, there, a great cat-fish, nearly a span wide across its glassy eyes-of-death, lifts a Gorgon's head, with worm-like tentacles depending from the mouth—a head of writhing serpent tails—not a pleasant countenance to look upon; transfixes that innocent duckling with its stony gaze; but the duckling, though quite useless as a winged cat, strikes with its tail force with its paddles, that it runs upon the surface of the water; and the cat, seeing a frog squatted too near the edge, glides under and suddenly seizes it, disappearing with a splash that startles the curlew and a brace of pippers whistling up bank to the stream above.

Now a long trail under cover of the long grass edge of the little cut bank, for the river is low, shies a water-rat pulling for the shore, and pauses with pulled fore-foot—Ready-aye ready! But the rat, lying motionless with the surface of a log, as it marks the gliding, bad little eyes of the weasel, dives with an angry splash.

The sink can dive as well, but now the weasel, reflected from the water, the silhouette of the wolf of the wood above, it has been so carefully slinking, and darts incontinent and a tangled mass of roots that have been washed bare by the freshets here in good retreat, but somewhat moribund on the vicissitudes of life—from the hunter to the hunted—and complacency of the loss of nourishment, forgetting that the coyote has an equal right to do so.

II.

The groves of trees in the hollow about with those curious open spaces among them, where for some occult reason Dame Nature hath decided her trees shall grow, and the matted undergrowth of them in snowy patches, with scattered logs and stumps, and the tree cranberry and hazel—now all in full bloom, with the red red wild rose mingling perfume in the air, might have given one the idea that we had entered, as I said, in some vast wooded wilderness, but, mounting the rise on either side, we beheld the broad prairie, dotted here and there with a sprinkling of farm buildings, which marked that man at last had come to take possession of the fair heritage which has been so patiently waiting him for many thousand years.

In one of these curious open spaces of the hollow, the blooming furze about their feet and birds twittering in the branches, the loud drone of bee or hum of occasionally passing, as two young men who, by their holiday costume, evidently belong to a race of pioneers camped about the oak and poplar groves above; but have retired from this sequestered spot for some consultation, where they will be in little danger of being overheard.

They have started a fire, which they are feeding with chunks from an old log, producing more smoke than heat, supposing that the grass is too green to burn, but the old log in the bottom is dense and carries the flame, and they are compelled to beat it out with green boughs. Having accomplished this, they are now stretched out at their ease.

If you have not too decided scruples we may approach sufficiently to catch their conversation.

So the governor sends money regularly to pay for your education in the art and theory of the right way of hanging on to the plough handles, eh?

"All two pin a month; and here I am don't make more than his two lads."

"I believe the old gent has quite a time getting them to do anything, though he knows little or nothing about farm work himself."

"I see someone has been putting you right onto them. Well, you might think so, if you should happen by some morning when he's calling them up. 'Hi there! Face up, Bub, that lazy loon and put hand to thy plow. Dost see thy neighbor out rolling his fields, and his grain all sown? Then't come to abject pauper-ry."

"Ha ha! Abject poverty? and the place all going to the dogs now. It'll be a bad break when thee come to abject poverty."

"The old man has money though," replies the other, "but he's money stowed away somewhere. He can pull a handful, and all in gold, when he's got to, as when they sued him on the binder, and Bob and Dinsey would like to know where he gets it. I think I tell you they're a rum lot—but he's a cunning old shark, the old man. If it wasn't for Miss Selma I'd be off long ago."

At the mention of this name the other perks up his ears, but proceeds more absently to rub the point of his nose with his long, white fingers.

Selma, you see, is a tip top girl and likes to keep everything straight; and I hate to go and leave her there with so much work on her—though I'd like well enough to accommodate you—and she doesn't seem to me, like one of the family, though I do sometimes see an odd childlike gleam in her with a fine, straight handsome daughter."

"So, I gets round and does the best I can, if I gets beat on a job, I goes over to auld Mooney and he puts me onto it."

"You think the boys would like to find the old chap's cache, eh?"

"Al, they might think a little loose change would do them no harm, and I fear their consciences would trouble them how they gawt it."

"I didn't say cash, though, but cache—cache—though likely they may be the same word, as I suppose no doubt they both come from cash, a box or chest in which valuables were kept."

"I'm not very well up on your western lingo; but cash with us means old money, which no doubt this is; but I daren't think he keeps it in the auld chest, as he sometimes leaves that unlocked."

"Then he may have enched his cache for the boys would get it."

"Wouldn't trust 'em—no farther than I could fling auld Bright by the tail."

"Ha! that wouldn't be very far; but 'pears to me that Bobby couldn't get on 'em had I can tell you—'bred in the bone. I don't think Miss Selma is anything to 'em. She can't remember much about the old place; but she knows they all lived in some fine house once; and she thinks the old gent, she calls her pa, used to drive them out fine days."

She tells me lots of things, but not when the rest are about, as they don't seem to want anything to do with the money, but by-gones," says the old man. "We've seen hard lines and ups and downs and their bin money a tack of the auld ship; but the less said the easier ended an 'em make a 'rest start here—al, good enough; but there's a mystery somewhere, if it's ever found out."

"May be so," was the other's mental comment; "but the gals' salve, say you and the d-and all the rest of them to the contrary notwithstanding—which I will put to the proof before the day is much older."

What was the precise object of the confab we are not able to say, as at this juncture there was a horn blown, and the young men sprang to their feet and proceeded to unhobble their ponies in a neighboring hollow, where they had filled up and laid down in a mat of pea-vine and wild-vetch; and presently they rode up the hill into as gay a throng as it would gladden the heart of any poor solitary man (troban) to witness.

The baggage had blown for Boots-and-saddles, as the gathering was what may be known in Western parlance as a house party; and here, sure was a mirthful mounding of merry maidens.

Young Bonhata was just in time to meet Miss Selma, who had a few stakes had been driven for convenience and he felt himself amply rewarded by the slight pressure of her hand (which he immediately interpreted to him as a sign of approval). A very shapely hand, too, notwithstanding hard work and lots of it—like the foot, which was nearly lost in the toe of the stirrup.

But he sadly noticed that the others, from whom he should have expected better treatment—crowded up and tried to cut it between them, as the merry cavalcade swept on to the rendezvous—now the parting of the ways, as they had formerly met. After this he had her more to herself; and by a little adroit manoeuvring, was holding back while the rest pushed on.

III.

The bronco is so plentiful and cheap in the West, and being light of foot and strong enough to carry an ordinary rider, almost every cowboy keeps one or more for driving or the saddle.

So the rule was made for some of these gatherings, that nothing but the saddle should be used, and a cart or two for provisions, etc., which were first carried by pony-back to the rendezvous agreed upon at some central point; from which, as anticipated, all proceeded at a certain hour to some picturesque camping ground.

"You come over so seldom to see us," the young man was saying. "You know how glad we are to see you. I heard them talking about it only the other day."

"I would like much, myself, to get about more," replies Miss Selma; "but I find it quite impossible, as all the work of the house falls upon me—at thrashing time, of course, we have to find someone."

"I don't know, indeed, what I should do without Egbert, who has been leaved so long, and so he has plenty of work. Sometimes I may get my pa or one of my brothers to turn the churn; but I am afraid often, that it is more trouble to persuade some people than it is to do the work yourself."

"I have an idea," says this young man. "I have had it for some time; that you would be more comfortable in an establishment, where there would only be one or two to look after. Might I—"

"Yes; that may be very true; but, you see, there are four or five of us, and not likely to be less; though I am afraid sometimes, that my poor old pa will go off some of these winters, as his asthma gets worse."

"Your brothers may marry."

"Oh-o!" she laughed merrily. "I never thought of that. I do wish they would. Couldn't you persuade some likely person Mr. Bonhata? 'I'm afraid they'll never try.'"

"I'm afraid Miss Selma—Miss Grimshaw—that."

"Oh, me call the Selma. It may be rather prim but it's not so grim."

"Ah! that's what I would say; the other is too grim. Couldn't you change it, Miss Selma?"

"Didn't you say you was afraid of something?"

"Oh did I? Yes, I was about to make the remark that, as I have such poor success to persuade, I should like some difficulty to shut me out. I would have some confidence to enlarge the sphere. There is nothing succeeds like success—though, in a manner, perhaps you are right, for they say again. When a man is his own advocate, he has a fool for his client so that perhaps I could advocate the cause of the masters Grimshaw here, and say any one might be won by proxy, you know, is generally considered dangerous; and I should rather you wouldn't wish that I should woo."

Anyone but.

BRANDON ELECTION.

Again our citizens are called upon to choose a representative, the usual tactics will be employed together with new devices adopted from our neighbors south of the 49th parallel: imported by Liberals who are in sympathy, and by many believed to have closer relations with them.

After the July election of last year it was affirmed by liberals that Pinkerton detectives were with us before and during the contest, had walked, talked, and slept with our people thereby possessing themselves of their secrets, and of course knew of illegal acts on the part of Conservatives to further the cause of their candidate. While no particular outcry can be raised against the more skilled methods of conducting political campaigns, it is not out of place to say that these secret service men are useful to the party employing them in a double way, they watch their opponents and more warily expend the money entrusted to them for the purpose of corrupting the electorate. This fact many virtuous voters overlook, wrongly concluding that as Mr. Macdonald found it expedient to resign, that he and his party only were to blame.

The expenditure of money has long been, and will continue a potent factor in winning elections, and not until the millennium is in full swing, and candidates and supporters alike have unlearned evil, will it cease?

Mr. Smart, at the last election was defeated by a narrow majority. Enough prominent members of his party abstained from working and voting to have produced a different result; it would not have been wise to put him up in this contest.

Mr. Adams is a successful business man and a reputable citizen; that he will make a good representative may be questioned; his conduct politically is therefore fair subject for criticism. In Dominion politics he is a Tory, ingenuously avowing himself such, and with equal candor the reason—his pocket. In Provincial matters he is a Liberal; again his convictions and personal interests with admirable suppleness assimilate. Where this lowstar of personal interest will ultimately lead him—who knows?

Conservatives have no quarrel with Liberals because of Mr. Adams' candidacy—but that large independent class which seeks the best may well turn away from such practical politics as legislate for self and exclaim—

"This Adams we eschew, nor can embrace, When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chased."

Mr. Macdonald is a consistent Conservative, a successful lawyer with rising fame, an affable generous citizen, was made Leader of the Opposition in the last Provincial Parliament, one whose selfishness and forensic ability entitle him to the fullest support. His exposition on Saturday evening last of the value and use of healthy and fair criticism of Government legislation, must commend itself to those who had the pleasure of hearing him. His method of dealing with the palpable mistake of the Greenway Administration in connection with the World's Fair Chicago was that of a statesman and patriot. He did not condescend to the ordinary clap-net current, but showed the irreparable loss of opportunity to exhibit our wheat to the world whereby Manitoba's pre-eminence as a wheat growing country might be known to all. His whole speech was logical, modest and manly, deservedly applauded to the echo by a large audience, mostly conservatives, but reasonably seasoned and leavened with Liberals.

R. R. R. OR RADWAYS READY RELIEF TO THE RESCUE.

In a letter which appears in a Saturday night publication and signed R. R. R., that patent vendor of relief takes exception to some truthful remarks we made, re the language contained in a speech by Mr. Adams the Grit candidate, and advocates the speedy return of Mr. Cliffe. Mr. Cliffe knowing the utter incapacity of the two Grit papers that are published in the city, also the strength of the conservative cause, did not deem it necessary to remain to give a helping hand to that victory, he knew so well his party would obtain, and although he left a so called "parasite" in charge, he still felt that, an insect would be capable of dealing with any argument brought forth by the brute force of the Grit party. Arguments that R. R. R. or (Radway's Ready Relief to the Rescue has not in any way tried to refute. He merely accuses the parasite of being incompetent as the Grit nominee and ventures the opinion that if that insect was on a platform without his grammar and dictionary, he would equal Mr. Adams in his ignorance. As we do not know how he obtained his information about our constantly using a dictionary and grammar, we have come to the conclusion, that he was our late "printer's devil" who was discharged for incompetency and has since we understand been taken on as Editor-in-Chief in one of the above sheets. Radway's Ready Relief says we are in doubt in regard to the election of the showman, whose show was so suddenly stopped by the officers of the law in Ontario, because we said "he had received the doubtful honor, of being the defeated candidate for Brandon." Had the patent medicine vendor understood english, he would have at once seen that we used the word doubtful in conjunction with honor, the latter a word that could not be used as applicable to a Grit candidature. There is, and was not anything doubtful in the defeat of the already defeated showman, but there is grave doubt as to the honor attached to the position of Grit candidate. In regard to the names, had he risen higher than printer's devil he would have known that typographical errors occur in every newspaper office. Should our patent medicine friend, at any future time, wish to refute a statement, there is one piece of advice we would offer him, and that is—

AUDITORS REPORT 1888.

The Star introducing Mr. Adams to the Brandon Electors for their support in the coming elections gives as his only qualification the financial success of his past administration as mayor of the city in 1887.

The following extract is from the auditors report, dated March 3, 1888.

"Surplus and Deficit account in the year 1886 shows a liability of $2,132.83 and in the year 1887 a further sum of $4,488.99 making a total deficit of $6,621.82. We would advise some step to be taken to have this yearly deficiency cleared off, or in a few years almost serious liability will be incurred."

Chas. Adams was chairman of finance in 1886 and mayor in 1887.

This was to keep a maximum rate of 15 mills for all purposes.

QUESTION. Had the same course been pursued in after years what would have been amount owing under this head. Comment unnecessary.

WHY WAS SMART DISMISSED.

This question has been asked repeatedly during this month, and the public, especially of Brandon, should long ere this, have been made aware of the reasons why the Premier of the Province should dismiss his former colleague from the important position of commissioner at the World's Fair.

Dismissals by employers are usually upon good grounds, what are the grounds in this case?

Why does Mr. Smart decline to publish the letter of dismissal from Mr. Greenway, and his reply? It cannot be out of regard for the Premier, is it not rather because he knows that if these letters were published, it would place the Government in such a bad light that any chance their candidate might have of election would be completely destroyed. The people of Brandon should not suspect Mr. Smart of having done anything wrong, or, of meriting dismissal. Still he is placing himself in an uneenviable position as a dismissed employee, who has no excuse to offer to his fellow citizens for his dismissal. He may still be willing to bear the burden of his position until after the election, but the public have a right to know the facts, and the letters should be published at once.

THE BRANDON ELECTION.

Mr. Adams gives his enemies cause to suspect a good deal when he accepted a nomination from a convention of government supporters. He owes to the electors generally, and to his own reputation as an honorable man, to take the earliest opportunity to declare whether he is in entire sympathy with the Government; whether he approves of its past and is prepared to follow it in the future. He is a most worthy private citizen, no doubt in this respect everything that his friends claim for him. But while very properly weighing with his friends in their choice of a candidate, his private qualities are not to be the determining factors in his selection as a representative. In the game of politics we have to lose sight of the individual in the greater issue of the public interest. It is not desirable that the Greenway Government should be encouraged to think that its past record is acceptable to the people of this province, as would be done if the electors of Brandon were to return a candidate in avowed sympathy with it; and it is in this light alone that Mr. Adams is to be regarded, now that he has challenged attention to himself. His friends will have to remember besides that in the matter of personal character he has no advantage over his opponent, Mr. Macdonald. If quite candid, indeed, they will admit that in these qualities which go to complete the personal equipment of a candidate he is inferior. Mr. Macdonald too, is an honorable and reputable citizen, quite as much so as Mr. Adams; while his education and training give him a vast superiority over the unimpaired man with reason he claimed for the other. If on personal grounds alone the contest is to be decided the electors of Brandon can have no hesitation in choosing the Opposition candidate.

That Mr. Adams has been a Conservative, and in Dominion politics is supposed still to be in sympathy with that party, is a consideration which can have no effect on the merits of the present contest. It is Mr. Adams' privilege to be as full of political inconsistencies as pleases his own fancy. The immediate and only relevant question is whether he is a supporter of Mr. Greenway and Government. Mr. Greenway himself was at one time a Conservative, and we cannot deny to Mr. Adams an equal right to change. The only hope is that if he has wholly discarded his old allegiance he did it more gracefully and without subjecting his motives to the suspicion of being interested. But this, no more than his personal character, is a factor. What the electors of Brandon will keep steadily in mind is the fact that the Government is quite strong enough and needs watching, and that it would be a mistake to impair the usefulness of the Opposition by defeating its leader. Mr. Macdonald is required in the House although Mr. Greenway were an angel which he is not. No poorer service could be done the province than, in view of the general situation of the time, to elect a supporter of the Government. We should think the force of this one argument would appeal to the good sense and moderation of Mr. Christie, Mr. Alexander and other gentlemen who had been mentioned as possible candidates, although under other circumstances they might be disposed to come to the rescue of Mr. Greenway.—Free Press.

A province may be compared to a child whose future success depends upon the manner in which it is managed in its infancy and early years. The Government stands "in loco parentis" and like the training of the child the successor otherwise of the province depends upon the wisdom of the Government.

A Government may become weak by reason of its strength (that is having too great majority) which tend to extravagance and corruption on the part of those possessing it.

It is therefore an absolute necessity for the good government of the country that there should be a capable and energetic opposition to act as a check on such extravagance and corruption and thus secure economy and good legislation.

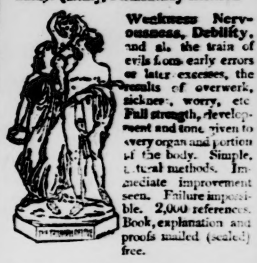

Vote for Macdonald.

Mr. Bedford, superintendent of the Manitoba experimental farm, says:—"We find that the hot winds of the 1st, 2nd and 7th instant has greatly shrunken the berry of all kinds of grain, except peas. We have threshed out some nice bright barley and oats, but very few of the barley samples weigh over 49 lbs. The yield of barley runs from 50 bushels to over 60 bushels per acre. Oats are not yet cleaned, so I cannot give the yield yet. We had a fearful wind storm on 14th inst. It threshed out any grain fully matured. Our Government thermometer reached 106.4 in the shade on the 7th inst. Visitors to the farm have greatly increased this year. No frost had been experienced at the farm.—Commercial.

A Toronto lady says: "I have tried a great many remedies but never found one to give me so much relief as Eesley's Liver Lozenges. I would not be without them." MARRIAGE.
ANDERSON—REYNOLDS—At the Baptist church, Brandon, August 23rd 1893, by M. Gold, Mr. James Anderson to Miss Maynet Reynolds, both of Brandon.

DEATH.
LANG—At Brandon, on Sunday August 27th, aged 56 years, Margaret Jane Smithson, beloved wife of Alexander Lang. The funeral took place from the family residence, 12th street, on Tuesday 29th inst., at 3 p. m. to the Brandon Cemetery.

WANTED: A GOOD WIFE.
A young man, a school teacher in the Rainy River country, arrived in the city Monday on a decidedly unusual mission. He makes no attempt to conceal the object of his trip, the fact he has been seeking the advice of two or three city clergymen and has also interviewed the guests at the hotel where he is staying at on the subject. His whole trouble is that he wants a wife. He is receiving a salary of $500 per year, but he only people he has to associate with are Indians and rough school-keepers, and his refined soul revolts at the idea of taking one of the dusky maidens to wife, hence his trip to civilization, where he hopes to prevail on some cultured daughter of white parentage to his solitary lot. The young man is undoubtedly serious in his mission, and as he has communicated his desires to the police, any young lady matrimonially inclined can send in her application to the police station and her chances of being made happy for life.

Crossing Crow's Nest.
Spokane Review, The Crow's Nest pass railroad, connecting the districts to the east of Kootenai lake with the Nelson and Fort Shepherd extension of the Spokane Falls & Northern railroad, has been located, and according to General Manager Galt, of the Great Falls and Canada, work will be pushed forward with great rapidity as soon as arrangements can be made to render secure the financial part of the undertaking. Money will be forthcoming, Mr. Galt adds, and as a guarantee of the earnestness of the undertaking he mentions the fact that a force of men is now at work widening the narrow gauge line beyond Lethbridge to a standard gauge to conform with the gauge of the proposed extension. General Manager Galt is also manager of the Alberta Railway and Coal company, and one of the principal owners of the coal properties near Lethbridge. It is under the direction of the railway and coal company that the extension is being projected, and the necessary concessions have been secured of the Dominion Government.

Provincial and Territorial.
Mr. R. D. Evans, a very respected citizen of Carberry, has moved with his family to Brandon, where he will manage the musical business of Jackson & Co. Mr. Evans is also agent for the G. N. W. Telegraph Co. in that city. Dick will be greatly missed in Carberry, where he has resided for three years. He is a hail fellow and never shuns an argument; is never ashamed to tell you what he believes and is well posted in religious matters. Dick is decidedly opposed to the idea that a man has inherent immortality and firmly believes that immortality is the gift of God. As a salesman in organs and pianos, we have heard it said that Mr. Evans has no equal in the country. The Express wishes him every success in his new field of labor.—Carberry Express.

The Grain Standard.
Mr. C. N. Bell, secretary of the Grain Exchange, received a telegram from the department of inland revenue yesterday afternoon instructing him to take the necessary steps for the collection of grain samples from which to make the standards for this year. No word has yet been received as to those who will comprise the board to fix the standards.

Like a Decent Christian.
When the winner of the Queen's Prize at Boley was being chaired, an impetuous tea-totaller rushed to the front with the inquiry "Is Segt Davis a tea-totaller?" The commanding officer, Mayor Blithway, answered sharply and quickly, "No, No, no, no, and no, and generally conducts himself like a decent Christian."

The Summer Death Rates.
The greatest evidence of the dangers of Cholera Morbus, Diarrhoea, and Dysentery, is the increase in the death rate of all the leading cities during the summer months. Men and women cannot be too careful of their habits of life during the heated terms, and particular attention should be paid to the diet of children. A supply of Perry Davis' Pain Killer should always be at hand, for it is the only medicine that can be relied on at all times as safe, sure and speedy. A teaspoonful will cure any ordinary case; but in severe attacks it is occasionally necessary to bathe the sufferer's stomach with the Pain Killer. All reputable druggists have it for sale. 25c. price per large bottle.
